

LABOR DAY PARADE FLOAT - "SUNK"

BEFORE:

Members of the Friends group and staff of the library worked many hours to assemble a silver and red float displaying services of the library. The brilliant color-scheme and lettering made this creation a sure contender for this first prize in the parade contest.

AFTER:

High winds, however, on the Labor Day holiday reduced the float masterpiece of fine art to a "happy wagon of smiling people." No first place award for the float, but participants had a "first rate" good time representing the library.

THANKS to everyone who participated. Special thanks to Ken Fabish who donated and drove the equipment. Anyone wishing to see the original float may pick up pieces still blowing across Morse and Commercial Avenues.
