Shipwreck Tales of the Great Lakes

The most dramatic, yet true, stories of Great Lakes shipwrecks, tinged with murder, mystery, deception and more than the usual amount of mayhem, plus exceptional underwater photography, will keep the audience on the edges of their seats. Husband and wife team Cris Kohl and Joan Forsberg of the Underwater Archaeological Society of Chicago will present this free program on Monday, November 9, at 7 PM.

Cris, a diver for 30 years and explorer of both ocean and Great Lakes shipwrecks, is a prize-winning land and underwater photographer and holds a master's degree in history. Appearing on many television shows, including the History Channel and the Discovery Channel, he has authored 11 books including the popular The Great Lakes Diving Guide, Titanic, The Great Lakes Connection and 100 Best Great Lakes Shipwrecks, Vol. 1 & 2.

Joan is on the staff of Chicago's annual "Our World-Underwater Show and is Chairman of its Shipwrecks and Our Marine Branch since 1996. Holding a history degree, she authored the Diver's Guide to the Kitchen. She is now copy editor for Wreck Diving Magazine for which she has contributed several articles as well as articles for Immersed.

Daylight Saving Time Ends

Daylight Saving Time (or summertime as it is called in many countries) is a way of getting more light out of the day by advancing clocks by one hour during the summer. During Daylight Saving Time the sun appears to rise one hour later in the morning, when people are usually asleep anyway, and sets one hour later in the evening, seeming to stretch the day longer.

The reason DST works is because it saves energy due to less artificial light needed during the evening hours — clocks are set one hour ahead during the spring, and one hour back to standard time in the autumn. Many countries observe DST, and many do not. Daylight Saving Time ends this year on Sunday, November 1, at 2 am. Don't forget to set your clocks back one hour before going to bed Saturday night!
