A PUBLICATION OF THE LOWELL PUBLIC LIBRARY

SEPTEMBER 1993

"FOCUS ON THE FUTURE"

Change comes as no stranger to the Tri-Creek area. New homes continue to dot the landscape, new businesses have appeared, and plans are in the making for a new Oak Hill School and Lowell Police Department.

This year the theme for the 74th Annual Labor Day Celebration is "Focus On The Future". The theme has special meaning for the Friends of the Library this year. The new Lowell Public Library will be opening its doors and welcoming a year of change!

Library Friends invite you to visit their "Focus On The Future" booth on Sunday, Sept. 5 and Monday, Sept. 6 at the Lowell Labor Day Celebration. The booth, located on Mill Street, will highlight special features of the new building and the many materials, services and programs the library offers.

A PROGRESSIVE LOOK

Finishing touches are being completed on the new library. Workmen are laying the beautiful new carpeting that will set the tone for a warm and pleasant atmosphere. Some of the new furniture has arrived. Sturdy tables and chairs will be available for future use by researchers and students. Comfortable chairs, upholstered in fashionable fabric, will be located throughout the main area of the library for patrons' use, and shelving will soon be assembled to await the move of the materials from the library on Fremont Street. A public announcement system is being installed and the trim on the building's study rooms is being completed.

On the library site, landscapers are preparing the grounds for sod and the planting of several shrubs and bushes that will enhance the beautiful wooded surroundings.

Library staff are anxious to settle in and prepare for opening day, tentatively set for mid-October. Watch the newspaper for exact dates.
